THE PRESIDENT’S CORNER – –

Hi there, Katydids! Sets in Order...

Whoops, I’d better take off my Caller’s hat!

It was fun to stand in for Jim these last three weeks, and I think with the help of Roger and Josie, Morris, and Joe Dehn, we all had a good time. However, I am sure we all look forward to Jim’s return to good health and to us. (The exposure to different voices and calling styles is good for dancers who will go to future hoedowns with other callers.) Get well soon, Jim. We need your smiling face and BIG HAT!

Char and I, as well as a few other Katydids, enjoyed the first SLAB dance at Ben Lomond where Harold Fleeman called the event. He was Caller for Katydids for many years before Jim. It was great to hear him back in form after a short recuperation from an operation. Nice to see Lee looking happy there, too!

CPSD is changing their night to Thursdays starting with a new class on September 4th (pick up flyers from sign-in table Friday night). Katydids are asked to “angel” with the idea of making new friends and inviting them to dance with us on Fridays. Jim has agreed to continue the experiment with the alternating tips for a while longer until we see how the CPSD class is progressing. Please distribute the CPSD flyers and come when you can to angel, as this could be a source of new dancers.

I hope you are all asking your parents to search through their closets for 50’s and 60’s dress for our Hot August Nights party! Jim will have some great music for us.

Keep smiling – Keep moving – See you in a square.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY ! !

REPORTS:*Officers:1. President:

- b. Roger suggested that a telephone tree method of contacting people be utilized rather than all email. This item will be revisited at a later date.

She was contacted by John Rodgers, a facilities person, who said that Lloyd Darknell was the contact regarding the church contract, but he did not provide an "emergency" contact in the event of such a thing as a water leak. Stephanie will follow up and inform Mr. Rodgers that Roger Hemsley is now the contact person.
- c. Stephanie has reviewed the church first aid box and will try to obtain small aspirin packets for it.

3. Treasurer:

- a. Don P. distributed copies and explained the June report. A motion was made, seconded, and approved that we accept the report.

It was suggested that we involve Morris and Louise in the completion process. It was suggested that hobbies and what employment area you worked before retirement be put on the application so that people with like interests could communicate with each other. It was also suggested that Roger mention people's birthdays at the first dance each month. It was suggested that we give guests a card to complete in order that we obtain information from them.

4. Membership:

- a. Bob said he would provide the Monthly Attendance Sheets starting in July.

- 7. Insurance: Don P. said that people are covered by insurance for 30 days after a class ends, but after class, they need to join a club to continue coverage. He said it costs $4.85 per new member. We have paid our club insurance on a yearly basis in November. ## FROM MARY & ROD ---

07/30/08

Dear Friends and family,

Finally – a rainy day! If the rain keeps up and I get this out today, I'll avoid being 3 months behind with this newsletter. – It has been a wonderful summer, full of variety. Let me tell you how it started —

We decided to start May off with a vacation! We left the 5th wheel at an Elks club in Lamar, CO, and drove west 300 miles to an RCI timeshare in Pagosa Springs. On the way we stopped at Great Sand Dunes National Park. Who expected this in Colorado? We'd climbed up a hill some distance away and took this picture. The dunes stretch for several miles and reach 600 feet in height. A cycle of melting water in the spring carrying the sand away in the spring and then summer winds pick it back up and deposit it just before the mountains. The kids bring the sleds, climb to the top and ride down! We also stopped nearby at Zapata Falls – quite a contrast in that it was still partially frozen over. Enough ice that I slid ten feet on my tail – almost bowled Mary over!

We got into the Rockies and found more what we were expecting. It's a lot more fun going over the passes without the 5'er! Still lots of snow patches around but the ski resorts were all closed. We stayed at the Wyndham, which was quite nice. Many of the forest roads and hiking trails in the national forest were still closed, but a short hike near Wolf Creek

Ski Resort brought us to this falls. Pagosa Springs was an interesting town and we caught it between seasons. It has one of the nicest – hot springs – setups we've seen – about 15 small natural-looking baths all outside beside the river. Each had different temperatures, ranging from 94 to 110 – and you could – ice plunge – in the river at about 50 degrees. We found several nice restaurants – but no ice cream.

We took a day and drove over to Mesa Verde National Park. What a beautiful drive, especially in the park and up onto the cliffs! We took a couple of guided tours which got us into some of the better-preserved cliff dwelling, like Cliff Palace shown here. These communities were quite large, with several hundred family units in some. They were challenging to get into with ladders – and the natives didn't use any. And most were some distance from water and their cultivated fields. Certainly a difficult life and no one knows why the cliff dwellers abandoned the area over a period of 40-50 years. We also hiked the Petroglyph Trail – more beautiful views and lots of fun making up our own stories to go along with the picture drawings.

We spent another day on the Durango-Silverton Train. We boarded in Durango at 9 AM with the temperature already in the mid 60's. People had warned us to dress warmly. After passing through the stream valleys and beginning to climb the passes, it started to snow. Fun – and pretty – until the train started to slip on the rails because the "sander" wasn't working. Did I mention that this was only the 2nd day the train had been running this year? Well, an exciting 2 hours of engineer ingenuity and we arrived in Silverton, a charming town preserved from the early 1900's mining town. But after a quick lunch we boarded buses (planned) for the ride back across two passes (that already had 4-6 inches of snow) and back to Durango, where it was 78 degrees and sunny.

Yet another day took us to Chimney Rock, which wasn't opening for another week, but we were able to walk in from the county road. What's four miles uphill? So from this sign to the top peak in the distance. Even though this was only 75 miles from Mesa Verde, the Native American "housing" was quite different – stone houses sharing common walls in small clusters built in the open. There were similar ceremonial buildings and the area was abandoned around the same time.

After our week in Pagosa Springs, we headed north through Ouray on our way to the Black Canyon of the Gunnison National Park. The drive was just gorgeous! Back through Durango, the passes to Silverton without snow, and then Ouray. What a place – we just had to stop. We spent several hours wandering the several blocks of this town surrounded by towering mountain peaks. There's a huge naturally-heated swimming pool that was crowded already, the beautiful Box Canyon Falls City Park – and ice cream! We tore ourselves away and stayed overnight at the very pleasant Country Lodge in Montrose, near the national park entrance. Well, it's a good thing we had planned to spend most of the day at the park – it took every minute we could spare. It's not as deep as Grand Canyon, but the sides are steeper and not nearly so far across – leading to a dark rive valley except for midday, hence the name. The drive along the south side had about 15 stopping areas, most at or a short walk from the edge. At the east end of the park a 5 mile, 13% grade road took us down to the river. Don't miss that experience!

A late night drive got us back to home where we rested for a day and then headed off to Kansas. We stayed a few relaxing days in a PA park in Deerfield Beach (the "beach" not to be taken too seriously). One day trip took us to Liberal and the official site of Dorothy's House – yes, that Dorothy. A nice set up with its own yellow brick road – you can buy a brick, have it inscribed and get it laid along side of former presidents, movie stars, and tourists. They had an extensive set of dioramas depicting the Wizard of Oz story and a collection of items from the book, stage show and movie. Another day was spent at the Lee Richardson Zoo in Garden City – a surprisingly large collection of animals in spacious settings, and free.

We headed north and stopped at Swanson Reservoir State Recreation Area near Trenton, NE, and just veg'ed for 5 days. It was a pretty park with very few people there – still before Memorial Day gets the camping season started. On the way, we passed through Colby, KS, where we found [a] huge bronze figure honoring Buffalo Bill. There was also a new museum being built nearby that had its initial phase open.

On Thursday, we drove into Gothenburg, NE, where we had made arrangements to pick up mail and to spend Memorial Weekend with the local Camping Square Dancers chapter – a nice way to make arrangements for a busy campground weekend. We got in just ahead of the daily thunderstorm and tornado warning and, since we were early arrivals, we were given the choice larger lot beside the canal and lake. We got set up and then it started to rain, so we headed inside for dinner. We've gotten pretty good at listening to the weather radio and tracking warnings across the map, and were engaged in doing that as it grew darker when there was a knock on the door. Since there wasn't an active warning in our county, we were surprised.

Upon opening the door, there was our 70+ hostess standing up to her knees in water yelling "We've got to get you out of here!" We reflected about 10 seconds, did our fastest pack job ever and got out successfully. Our site was in the middle of this lake. It had gone down a lot by picture time – earlier the water was at the top of the tables!

As the weather cleared, we had a great time dancing with Chapter 073. We also enjoyed the Pony Express Museum, the Sod House Museum and we got to try Runzas – a meat pie similar to Michigan's "pasties". Our drive to Kearny was rewarded with the Great Platte River Road Arch spanning I-80, which we thoroughly enjoyed.

We moved west to North Platte – home of the busiest railroad switching yard in the country. The new visitor center and viewing tower for the Bailey Rail Yard won't open until later in the summer, but that will make this a great visitor attraction. We enjoyed Cody park with its trains and animals – who expected peacocks to live here! The Lincoln County Historical Museum and Village took half a day and we enjoyed the Buffalo Bill Ranch State Recreation Area with its Wild West Show memorabilia. But our highlight of this stop was [a] young engineer, about 11, who was hanging around one of the train exhibits and enthralled us for half an hour explaining how the locomotive works and telling stories of life and adventure in the early railroad period.

We continued northwest in Nebraska and finally began to see more than open plains! Yes, real signs of elevation. We stopped at Chimney Rock National Historic Site – a way mark for early western pioneers that the plains were ending (1/3 of the trip west) and they were approaching the foothills. It was disappointing in that we couldn't really get near Chimney Rock, much less get on it. So we moved on to Scotts Bluff. Another nice state park campground mostly to ourselves. It held the only lighthouse in Nebraska, a beautiful CCC project - but then who expected even one? A nice hike up the bluff – that's the trail in the picture – goes through a people tunnel to the other side and then up to the (windy) top.

We continued to Fort Robinson State Recreation Area in the NE corner of Nebraska and the geography was really getting interesting! We began passing through rolling hills and pine forests – a pleasant change from six months of mostly plains. A short drive away was the Toadstool Geologic Site – our first taste of "the badlands". Pretty impenetrable miles of nearly-eroded mountains, masses of rock and clay with large channels cut by wind and rain and not a plant in sight. We also visited the Husdon-Meng Bison Kill – an in-process geology dig with the remains of hundreds of bison bones, cause unknown. A water hole trap? An Indian killing area? A natural epidemic or event? For now, a mystery. We also got to see our first free-roaming bison.

So ended May. We'll spend another four weeks in the Canadian Rockies, then head to Glacier NP and Yellowstone. Then down the east side of the Rockies toward the Albuquerque Balloon Festival in October. Keep sending your suggestions and let us know how you spent your summer. No phone service for another month but you can reach us by e-mail marymonti@aol.com
